NEW-YEAR'S DAY, THE PIRET DAY OF THE YEAR. The custom of celebrating by some re ligious observance, generally accompaded by festive rejoleing, the first day of the year, appears to have provailed among most of the uncient nations. The Jews, the Egyptians, the Chinese, the Romans, and the Mohammedans, dthough differing as to the time from which they reckened the commencement of the year, all regarded it as a day of special Interest. In Rome, the year anciently began in March; and when Numa, according to the ancient legend, transferred it to the 1st of Janusity, that day was held sacred to Januar afrous, who was Hos supposed to turn at once back upon the old year and forward into the new. On the establish ment of Christianity, the usage of a solegin inauguration of the New Year was relained; but considerable variety revailed, both as to the time and as to the manner of its celebration. Christnas Day, the Annunclation (Murch 25th.) Easter Day, and March 1st, baye dl, at different times or places, shared with the 1st of January the honour of pening the New Year; nor was It till ate in the 16th c., that the 1st of January was universally assepted as the Arsi lay of the New Year. The early futbers - Chrysostom, Ambroso, Augustine, Peter Chrysologus, and others --in repolation of the immoral and suratitions observances of the pagan festival, probibited in Christian use all festive celebration; and, on the contrary, directed that the Christian year should be opened with a day of prayer, fasting, and humillation. The mundute, however, was but partially ob-served. The festal character of the day, generally speaking, was pertinuciously preserved, but the day was also observed as a duy of prayer; and this character was the more readily attached to it whon the year began with the 1st of January, as that day, being the eighth after the nativity of our Laid, was hold to be the commemoration of his circume)sion (Luke II, 21.) The social observanges of the first day of the New Year appear to have men in substance the same in all ages. From the earliest recorded colubration, we find notice of feasting and the interchange of presents as usages of the day. Suctonias allades to the bringing of presents to the capital; and Tacitus makes a similar reference to the praclice of giving and receiving New Year's gifts. This custom was continued by the Christian kingdoms into which the Western Empire was divided. In Engfand we find many examples of it, even as a part of the public expenditure of the court, so far down as the reign o Churles II.; and, as all our antiquarian writers mention, the custom of interchanging presents as common in all classes of society. In France and Lingand it still subsists, although eclipsed in the latter country by the still more popular practice of Christmas gifts. In any countries, the night of Now-Year's Eve, "St. Sylvester's Lye," was celebrated with great festivity, which was prolonged till after 12 o'clock, when the New Year was ushered in with congratulations, complimentary visits, and mutual wishes for a Happy in the sahoolma'm's dask, thinking she would "smell a mice" and give them a

One of the elders of the church insisted upon bis remaining till the benedlation had been pronounced, and undertook to push him buck into the seat. The man explained that he wished to leave, but the elder refused to take any explanation, and the man drew off and atruck the elder in the eye. In an instant an indeeribuble some of confusion ensued

The paster of the church endeavored to preserve order, but without avail. The men of the congregation made a rush for the belligerent worshipper, while the women fainted. Brother Glover had a big voice. There was no time, tone or tane it it, but he believed value actually received for them by as he pleased in church singing. When the new church was finished it had to be dedicated, and a choir was carefully trained to do the singing. Brother (lover was not of the choir, and the intention was to rule him out of the vocal exercises. The choir had carefully rebearsed a new dedicatory byton and everything was ready for the interesting eremonies. The church was crowded, and Brother Glover was in his place in a plece was struck up, and Brother Glover's voice rose loud above the organ, There was a pause. The organ and eciling, explained that it was a new piece, which the choir alone had practiced, and requested the congregation not to join in the singing. The piece was re-commenced, and again Brothe Glover's big voice broke it up. The preacher then fixed his eyes on Brother Glover and requested him to keep silence during the performance of the new piece, which he did not enderstand, and Brother Glover, looking at his beloved pastor with his big, round eyes, replied in a big voice; "Look-a-here,

Mr. Barnbart, I paid $500 toward repairing this darned old gospel box, and by thunder I will sing." The preacher gave it up, and so did the choir. PREACHER ROBBING HEN ROOSES. FARM AND GARDEN, NEW-YEAR'S GREETINGS.

The greetings of the season to all our and may the year commencing to-day health, good weather and good crops.

THE WAY TO BLANKET HORSES.

derstand how to blanket a horse to prothe body that need protection entirely exposed to cold storms and chilling

Those parts of the body of a horse flanks and rump. When we are expos-ed to a current of cold air to guard and back. If these parts be kept pro-tected, the lower part of the bady will endure a degree of cold far more intense, without any injury to the bady, than if the lungs were not warm with holds in the protection of horses. The blanket should cover the neck, withers and shoulders, and be brought around the breast, and be buttoned or buckled as closely as a man buttons his overcoat. Let the lungs of a horse be proteeted with a heavy blanket, and he will seldom contract cold, even if the hindmost parts of his body are not cov-

We refer more particularly to blanketing horses that have become unusually warm by violent exertion or hard driving, and exposing them to a current of cold air while standing still. Many of our best teamsters protect the breasts of their horses by a piece of heavy cloth about two feet square, hanging down from the lower end of the collar. This is an excellent practice in cold weather, as the most lar-portant part of the animal is shielded from cold wind, especially when travelling toward a strong current. The forward end of the horse blanket should be made to fit as closely around the breast of a horse as our garments fit our badies. Most horses will contract a violent cold almost as soon as a man, if not loading or unloading, without a heavy blanket to protect his shoulders and lungs, and be will take cold sooner than some men,- Erchange. IS THERE ANYTHING IN A NAME!

Asks a correspondent of one of our exchanges. Sometimes there is much in it and sometimes very little. The horticultural editor of the Country Gen-Ceman informs us that a pear grower near Buffalo sent a considerable amount of fine Virgaiin pears to market and marked them with that name, but after shapping the first consignment he concluded that the French mine of White Dayenno would sound better, As a coassquence the White Doyennes only brought half the price of the Virgalius. and hence in this case the name made facy per cept, difference in favor of an old one. Dr. Silvester (a noted pear grower) sent a lot of fine Napoleon pears to New York during the late French war, and not being able to sell them readily the consigner changed the name and marking to that of Bismarck, when "they sold readily, and for some days afterwards be had frequent calls more of those Bismarcks."

Marks as well as names have a value and together with the appearance of the surroundings of the article, have much to do with the price. It is told of a noted maker of "Philadelphia gilt-edged, butter" that for many years he used swan on his print and acquired a wonderful reputation, and sold at high prices. The old print having been broken, he obtained a new and different one. The butter would not sell, and he was compelled to replace the swan. Bartlett pears into two lots, one of was placed in a barrel in the usual manage, while each specimen of the other lot was wrapped in tissua-paper, and the barret word with the same kind; the former solices five dollars per barrel and the latter to fifteen dollars, a difference of ten dotlars per barrel for appearance alone. Name, mark and appearance of nearly, if not quite all, of our farm products, have much to do with the price realized.

STOUTNESS AND VINEGAR.

Taken in moderation, there is no doubt that vinegar is beneficial, but in excess it impairs the digestive organs. Experiments on artificial digestion show that if the quantity of acid he diminished, digestion is retarded; if increased beyond a certain point, digestion is arrested. There is reason, therefore, in the common notion-unhappily blanketed while they stand still, after to keep down any alarming adiposity, too often relied on-that vinegar helps having been exercised as violently as to keep down any alarming adiposity, and that ladies who dread the disaplong as a horse is kept in motion, there is little danger of his suffering any inconvenience from cold winds. But alternative of planguess expanding into "fat," may arrest so dreadful a result by liberal potations of vinegar, but they can be a convenience from cold winds. can only arrest it at the far more dreat-ful expense of their heatth. The amount of noid which will keep them thin will destroy their digestive powers. Portal gives a case which should be a warning. "A few years ago a young ady in easy circumstances enjoyed good health; sho was very plump, had a good appetite, and a complexion blooming with roses and lilies. She began to look open her plumpness with suspicion, for her mother was very stout, and she was aftedd of becoming like her. Accordingly she consulted a woman, who advised her to drink a glass of vinegar daily. The young lady followed the advice, and her phospness diminished, She was delighted with the success of the experiment, and continued it for more than a month. She began to have a cough; her body wasted away, and a diacrhory terminated her Rio." There fore, young ladies, never pine for grace-ful slimness, but accept Nature's be-
